

2-Week Winter Sweden Itinerary

Åre Ski & Cabin Adventure — relaxed pace, hearty food, real rest days

📅 Late December - Early January

✈️ Flight-Delay Protection — built into the plan

- No hard commitments on Day 1 or Day 2 — arrival and the day after are wide open, so a delay costs nothing.
- Fly into Stockholm Arlanda (ARN), not a small regional airport — far more backup options if things go sideways.
- Overnight in Stockholm before heading north instead of rushing a same-day connection.
- A buffer day sits before the flight home too, so a late return never threatens departure.

🏠 Cabin Stay

Book a traditional Swedish stuga in Åre or nearby Duved — most include a wood fire, kitchen, and sauna, close to lifts and trails. Look for one within walking or short driving distance of a grocery store for slow mornings in.

🍴 Food Notes

- Breakfast: Fried eggs and toast — a Swedish staple, easy to stock from ICA/Coop for cabin mornings.
- Meatballs: Try köttbullar in Åre village at least twice — classic with lingonberry and mash.
- Fika: Afternoon coffee and pastries everywhere — a nice slow ritual between ski days.

🎿 Adventure Add-Ons

Pick 2-3, not all — keep it relaxed

- Dog sledding through the fjäll
- Snowmobile tour
- Ice fishing on a frozen lake
- Reindeer sledding with local Sámi guides
- Aurora watch — a bonus, not a given: Åre sits south of Sweden's prime aurora zone, so treat it as an opportunistic late-night check on clear nights, not a booked activity

🕒 Pacing & Practical Notes

- Only 4-5 active ski days total — the rest are rest, adventure, or travel/buffer days.
- Nothing is scheduled back-to-back with flights, so a delay never cascades into the trip.
- Village grocery stores keep shorter hours than city ones, and close early Dec 24, all of Dec 25, and Jan 1 — stock up ahead on those days.
