4. DESIGN IT WITH AI

Starter Prompt

Design a realistic 7-day winter itinerary in Japan for a traveller who prefers a comfortable and relaxed holiday. The trip should take place in December and focus on experiencing local Japanese food and seeing snow. The traveller enjoys tuna but does not like natto. Avoid overly packed schedules and minimise long journeys because the traveller gets motion sickness. Include places, activities, food stops and short descriptions. Make the itinerary realistic and suitable for a one-page travel PDF.

Day 1 – Tokyo: Arrival & Local Food

Arrive in Tokyo and check into a comfortable hotel. Take a relaxed evening walk around Asakusa and enjoy fresh tuna sushi.

Day 2 – Tokyo: Culture & Food

Visit Senso-ji Temple and explore traditional streets. Enjoy local snacks and lunch, then keep the afternoon free for shopping or relaxing.

Day 3 – Tokyo → Hakone: Snow & Onsen

Take a comfortable train to Hakone. Enjoy Mount Fuji views if clear, relax in an onsen, and have a warm Japanese dinner at a ryokan.

Day 4 – Hakone: Relaxed Winter Day

Have a slow morning and explore scenic Hakone. Try seasonal local dishes and spend the evening relaxing at the accommodation.

Day 5 – Hakone → Nagano: Snow Experience

Travel to a snowy area around Nagano. Enjoy winter scenery and a gentle snow walk if conditions allow. Try warm local soba.

Day 6 – Nagano: Snow & Local Food

Enjoy the snow at a relaxed pace and explore local food. Choose tuna or other fresh seafood and avoid natto.

Day 7 – Return to Tokyo & Departure

Return to Tokyo using comfortable public transport. Have a final Japanese meal, buy souvenirs, and head to the airport.

5. KEEP A MINI PROMPT LOG

First thing the AI got wrong or missed: The first draft included too many activities and long journeys, which did not suit the traveller's preference for a comfortable and relaxed trip. It also did not consider motion sickness enough.

What I changed after feedback: I reduced the number of activities, added more rest time, shortened unnecessary travel, and focused the itinerary on local food and snow experiences.

- They have seen the draft.
- I asked what felt right and what needed changing.
- We refined it until they would actually take the trip.
