

Keira's Hong Kong Homecoming

A family return trip | Fortune, comfort & the tastes of home

DESTINATION	Hong Kong (home city)	TRAVELLERS	Keira, with family
WINDOW	Mid-February – Mid-May (approx. 3 months)	PACE	Comfortable — late starts, private transfers, no rushing

THE THREE-MONTH RHYTHM

Month 1 — Settling In	Month 2 — Fortune & Culture	Month 3 — Leisure & Farewell
Reconnecting with family, resting after CNY crowds ease, easing back into local rhythm with familiar neighbourhood haunts.	The signature Wong Tai Sin fortune-telling day (below), temple circuit, tea houses and heritage quarters, timed for clear-sky days.	Slower island escapes, harbour views, favourite dessert rounds on repeat, and unhurried goodbyes with family.

SIGNATURE DAY — THE FORTUNE VISIT

Scheduled for Month 2, on a forecast-clear morning (temple offerings and incense are an outdoor ritual — see Weather Contingency). Booked with a private car for door-to-door comfort; no queues before 10am.

10:00	Wong Tai Sin Temple	The classic stop for asking about fortune and wealth. Light incense, make a wish at the Main Altar, then draw a kau cim fortune stick in the temple's covered arcade of licensed fortune-tellers for a reading on the year ahead. Unhurried, shaded walkways — easy pace throughout.
12:00	Good Wish Garden	A quiet classical garden inside the temple grounds — covered pavilions, koi ponds and a waterfall for a relaxed sit-down after the reading.
12:45	Kai Kai Dessert, Prince Edward	Old-school tong sui shop, ten minutes by private car. Black sesame paste and red bean soup, both made fresh daily — naturally coriander-free, no need to flag with the kitchen.
14:00	Sik Sik Yuen Arcade, browse	Light browsing among the incense and souvenir stalls surrounding the temple; a gentle close to the morning with no fixed schedule.

COMFORT FOOD RITUAL

Rotating dessert stops kept in easy reach all three months — the two flavours Keira asked for, on repeat:

Yuen Kee Dessert, Sheung Wan — a century-old sesame-paste specialist; the black sesame is stone-ground on site.

Kai Kai Dessert, Prince Edward — the reliable red bean soup fallback, open late, no reservation needed.

Honeymoon Dessert (any branch) — for a mall-based, air-conditioned option on hotter or wetter afternoons.

Dietary flag: no coriander / cilantro anywhere on the trip — flag this at dim sum and noodle stops; dessert shops above are naturally clear of it.

WEATHER CONTINGENCY

Comfort comes first — nothing here is fixed to a single day:

Rain or heat: swap outdoor legs for indoor equivalents — Hong Kong Palace Museum, K11 Musea, or PMQ cover the culture and browsing slots without changing the day's shape.

Temple visit: held loosely within Month 2 rather than dated — moved to the next clear morning if needed, since incense and the garden are best enjoyed outdoors.

Typhoon signal 8+: full stand-down day — stay in, order dessert delivery, resume the plan once signals lower.

Private car bookings throughout carry free reschedule, so a change in forecast never forces a change in plan.

Built around Keira's own notes: home to Hong Kong, roughly February onward for three unhurried months, a fortune reading at Wong Tai Sin, black sesame and red bean soup on repeat, no coriander, and every plan flexible enough to survive the weather.
